Your Beginning Reader and You!
When children are beginning to read it's important to make books a daily habit!

Spend 20 minutes a day listening to or reading with your child to build a lifelong love of reading. Interact with your child while they read, or ask questions about the book once they are finished in order to encourage reading comprehension.

Children reading at this level may want to read the same book over and over again. That's okay! By rereading their favorite books, children begin to recognize sight words and spend less time sounding out harder words. Encourage your child to ask you for help with words or phrases that they don't understand. You can explain what the words mean, as well as demonstrate correct pronunciation.

Keep reading aloud to your child even after they can read by themselves! Listening to more complicated stories builds their comprehension skills and allows them to hear what a good reader sounds like.
